5 July Pentecost 5 - Psalm 45:10-17

Weddings are greatly anticipated times and, as we know how recent high profile examples, when there's a royal wedding the expectations are heightened even further. We might recall the fanfare around the wedding of Prince Harry and Meghan Markle in 2018 to remember the kind of interest such events can garner (we might also ask ourselves why many are so interested, but that's another question). Psalm 45 is set within the context of a royal wedding, probability that of the king, and the psalmist writes a kind of ode for the royal couple. One can well imagine this psalm (or parts thereof) being spoken or sung as part of the wedding liturgy. The verses offer a triumphalist account of the royal couples splendour and God's providential purposes in bringing them together. A royal wedding of this kind was seen as a blessing from God and an assurance of God's ongoing provision for the people. Indeed, the joy of the union is portrayed as being indicative of the people's joy under the care of God's guiding and protecting hand in one sense this is a difficult psalm with which to engage as its context is so narrow and its imagery so grandiose. In another, perhaps it shows that such events can be signs of hope in God's enduring love .

Last Sunday there was a special planning service for key church leaders on. Everyone is now invited to return to the church this Sunday, 5 July for the first "new normal" worship service. Government and Synod restrictions will apply, i.e. social distancing, hand sanitising, signing in etc. People at the door, who attended the planning meeting will welcome members and advise you on the guidelines to be followed on entering the church.

Note: some guidelines have been relaxed but the following applies.

- 2 sqm per person in any space
- 1.5 m physical distancing
- Strict hygiene particularly in relation to hands and hard surfaces
- A requirement for everyone to sign in and sign out of events and activities

Also there will be no morning tea served during July. We hope to recommence in August.

URGENT VALID POLICE CHECK

We all have the right to feel safe, valued and respected.

This is necessary for all volunteers, especially people working with children, people working with the elderly/vulnerable, group leaders and people handling church money i.e. offering counters. Police screening is now done online. If you need help with this, please contact Heather, Do Young or Sharon in the office on Thursdays.
